(Old Greenwich, Conn., October 29, 2009) - ROCKIN' WATER™ is making a difference in kids' lives. Not just with its great nutritional attributes of having 11 vitamins and minerals, 3 grams of fiber, and an antioxidant level equal to a serving of fruit, but with its work in one of the poorest areas of the United States, the Appalachian region of Martin County, Kentucky.

Amy Guerrieri, founder and CEO of ROCKIN' WATER, created ROCKIN' WATER with the goal of making a difference in kids' lives and ROCKIN' WATER is "made by Moms who love their kids™." Last spring Amy was moved by a television segment she saw on the people of Appalachia and their many nutritional, financial and emotional struggles. Amy knew she had to do something to help these families - and this is why she had created ROCKIN' WATER - to make a difference in kids' lives. Amy jumped into action and traveled to Kentucky to see first-hand the extreme level of poverty in the area, then immediately founded a non-profit to help the families in Appalachia through R.A.M.P. - the Rockin' Appalachian Mom Project.

ROCKIN' WATER, R.A.M.P. and Amy Guerrieri are striving to improve the nutritional well being of the children in Appalachia. For every bottle of ROCKIN' WATER sold, ROCKIN' WATER will donate two cents to R.A.M.P. R.A.M.P.'s efforts have been so impressive that NBC Nightly News with Brian Williams originally profiled the story in a "Making A Difference" segment in March. The story was one of the top-viewed online stories for two weeks following the airing. NBC Nightly News with Brian Williams will be going back to Kentucky with Amy and her "Mom Brigade" of volunteers again in November for a follow-up story.

Just this year, Amy has personally been to Kentucky three times bringing thousands of bottles of ROCKIN' WATER, and generating truckloads of donated items including much needed school supplies, backpacks, diapers, children's and adult clothing, furniture, beds and anything else that is needed. Amy has also been mentoring Moms in Martin County, Kentucky, the poorest county in the U.S., to help them with nutritional needs of their children, financial resources, and the well being of their family. In recent months, R.A.M.P. has been working one-on-one with the Moms and children, working on nutritional education with the families and the schools, and securing repairs for one family's home that was in dire need of repair; their home is now livable and safe for their children.

When Amy returns to Kentucky on her next visit, she will be bringing with her a truckload of ROCKIN' WATER, donated coats and winter outerwear for the children, and close to 100 kerosene heaters R.A.M.P. has raised funds for to help keep 100 families warm during the cold winter months. In addition, another full truckload of medical supplies and hospital equipment worth more than $75,000 will also be shipped to Kentucky. The medical equipment will fill two respite centers in Martin County, which will help families with loved ones that are elderly or have disabilities. R.A.M.P. was able to secure the medical supplies through the generosity of Amy Guerrieri's childhood friend, Jim Ressler, co-founder of Medical Angels, which is a New Jersey based non-profit that helps get medical equipment to those in desperate need.

"When I saw the story on the poverty in Appalachia, I couldn't believe that such bad circumstances were here in the United States," said Amy Guerrieri. "I'm a Mom of four children and I thought it was important for kids to know that poverty existed here in the United States - it wasn't something that was just in other countries. I wanted my children to know too that there was something that could be done to help, so through R.A.M.P., we are able to work community-to-community, family-to-family, Mom-to-Mom and kid-to-kid to really make a difference in their lives." Amy is so committed to R.A.M.P. and its efforts in Martin County, Kentucky, that she has told the residents there that she "would be back." And, she has kept her promise, returning to the area already four times in the past nine months. Amy plans on continuing her visits to Kentucky and mentoring the Moms there, working with the schools and the families on nutritional education and helping make a better life for the children of Appalachia.

"These kids are our future," said Guerrieri. "Kid need to eat healthy so they can focus in school and grow up and have a better life." One of the areas where R.A.M.P. hopes to make a difference is through the aspect of "paying it forward." Each family R.A.M.P. helps is required to then help another family in the area. R.A.M.P.'s goal is to get a family to be self-sustaining and live a healthy life.

Margaret, one of the Moms Amy has been mentoring, lost her husband in February to a heart attack at the young age of 39. Margaret has four children and didn't know where to turn. Without a job, a husband, and a limited education, Margaret thought her life was over. Then Amy and the Moms of R.A.M.P. showed up on her doorstep and helped guide Margaret and her family. Since that time, Margaret has lost 60 pounds, has changed the way she shops and cooks for her family, has gotten a job and has transformed her life.

Roundup reports in a cut-to-the-jugular style.

Greenwich Roundup: Where Your Local Newsstand And Blog Junkie Brings You All Of The Town's News

If I haven't already made it clear, I am fascinated by newspapers, especially Greenwich newspapers. This interest extends beyond the discussions about the evolving business model of the industry and crowd sourced reporting that I often write about. What is so captivating about newspapers is that, as artifacts, they represent the crystallization of flows of information. Every edition of a newspaper is a time capsule comprised of hundreds of stories stitched together into a composite narrative.

Yet They are being replaced by citizen journalist who are creating a more fluid naritive.

There is something uncanny about the way that stories from around the world are distributed across web sites blogs and newspapers.

If you removed the date stamps from Greenwich Roundup it would read as an "exotic and fascinating surrealist poem about our town.

About Greenwich Roundup

Greenwich Roundup is not your typical website or blog. It is intended to provide resources for critical analyses of news and information reports that concern the people issues and events of Greenwich.

Everyone knows that news stories presented by the various local and national media outlets and blogs may or may not be truly objective.

Therefore, it is important that the residents of Greenwich practice critical and discriminating reading. It is a skill that crucial in trying to discern the realities behind all the reporting and rhetoric that is written about the village.

The coverage provided by Greenwich Roundup is intended to allow town residents and any other interested persons to be aware of all the "good, the bad, and the ugly" of reporting about Greenwich.

We have provided Greenwich residents with guidelines for critical reading, as well as, advice on how readers can express themselves to reporters editors and publishers.

Plus we have provided the critical readers of Greenwich good counsel on the submission of comments to the online forums sponsored by this blog and some news sites.

We encourage all the residents of Greenwich to speak out about what ever is on thier mind.

All the information is provided below.

But first take a few moments to learn your way around Greenwich Roundup.

The basic feature of Greenwich Roundup is the scrollable index of stories. There is also a search function that will let you search every page or posting of this site.

Moreover, there is an archive of stories going back to 2006 and beyond.

Plus there is an extensive list of keywords that will open up a page of related news stories and blog posts.

Clicking on the underlined headline of a story opens a new page with a copy of that story, as well as a link to the URL of the original source of the story being reported on.

Please note that Greenwich Roundup operates within the guidelines of The Society of Professional Journalists and observes that organization's Code of Ethics.

We hope you enjoy your stay at Greenwich Roundup and will bookmark our website, so that you can come everyday for the latest news, blog links and information about Greenwich.

Greenwich Roundup Is On Your Side

Greenwich Roundup is a lean mean truth telling machine operated by citizen journalists.

Our mission to empower Greenwich Residents by giving them a voice larger than their own. We will help you resolve problems with businesses, government agencies, and other organizations.

Our services are free and confidential and available to all individuals and small businesses who are being ignored by the powers that be.

Resources For Letter Writers

Greenwich Roundup publishes email addresses for reporters, editors, and publishers when such addresses are publicly made available.

We encourage our reader to send intelligent, civil, and reasonable emails to these journalists, editors and publishers..

However, a critical reader who sends some correspondence to an email address obtained from this website is, in one sense, representing this blog.

What the writer says, and how it is said, reflects directly on Greenwich in general and on this site in particular.

Local "mainstream" reporters, editors and publishers are interested in deadlines and getting stories written that people will read.

If a critical reader can help them do that, then their contributions will be greatly appreciated.

Remember, good stories are factual and well organized, but they also communicate something of the human spirit.

Likewise, letters to local "mainstream" reporters, editors and publishers, while based on heartfelt convictions, also should be well organized, with points and logic developed in a rational sequence.

Proper grammar, spelling, and capitalization also help the local "mainstream" reporter, editor or publisher view the received letter as worthy of serious consideration.

Brevity and conciseness are very important, and a long-winded rambling discourse is not likely to be given serious consideration.

For that matter, a "letter" does not even have to be a letter, a single sentence can get a point across.

Nor does a letter have to be for publication or even come from a verifiable source, all it needs to do is provide valid food for thought.

Resources For Critical Readers

The critical readers of Greenwich Roundup know that when reading, viewing, or listening to any local "mainstream" news report or blog post, the main thing to realize is that truth and objectivity may be partially obscured or totally absent.

While local "mainstream" media outlets and blogs often self-righteously proclaimed that only the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, is published, the critical reader knows that local news reports in "mainstream" media have three primary purposes: (a) to entice their readers, (b) to be "politically correct" so as not to offend the powers that be, and (c) to lure advertisers by showing the number of docile readers the local publication draws.

Beyond these less than honorable motivations listed above, local "mainstream" reporters, editors and especially publishers are also prone to inject their own personal prejudices and biases, either consciously or unconsciously.

The critical reader should be aware of these potential problems.

The critical reader needs to have many questions in his mind when examining local "mainstream" media items and blog posts.

Many times the vocabulary employed by local "mainstream" journalists and editors is often pejorative and very value laden. Actually, this is an argument in and of itself that there is a bias.

It is up to the critical reader to point this out by means of blog posts and letters to the local "mainstream" newspaper editors and publishers..

There are honest and objective local "Mainstream" journalists, editors and publishers who try and produce a newspaper that presents all sides of every issue. . However, these local journalists, editors and publishers who have succeed in resisting the pressures to be biased are few and far between.

Many times the critical reader will discover that these local "mainstream" journalists, editors and publishers cave in to pressures, and/or who are prejudiced and nonobjective by nature.

It is therefore up to the critical reader to carefully evaluate and then reject or accept the claims and assertions that are made in any given news story or blog post.

Local "mainstream" journalists, editors and publishers need to make sure they produce well-researched articles that are based on objective description of empirical facts.

One of the goals of Greenwich Roundup is to help these local "Mainstream" journalists, editors and publishers need to strive to convey reality and contribute to enlightenment of Greenwich.

However, the critical reader must understand that journalism which abandons these criteria can be misleading and destructive, pandering to the powers that be rather than courageously and honorably serving truth and justice.

Resources For Blog Comments

More and more local "mainstream" media-sponsored web sites are providing submission forms or links where anyone and everyone can post "comments" on their stories.

Some sites also provide various forums of one type or another.

However, these forums may require registration.

Many of the comments, suggestions, and cautions that we have provided the critical reader about the submission of comments are very applicable to participation in these forums.

There are no established "standards" for the submission of these comments, and it is necessary and important to very carefully read the instructions, requirements, and limitations for submitting your comments.

Some local "mainstream" newspaper or blog sites may ask for a name, but these are not checked, so there is no need to use your real name if you do not want to..

Other local "mainstream" newspaper or blog sites may allow only a first name, some may permit the inclusions of URL references, links, HTML code, and email addresses, whereas others may not.

When submitting such comments, it is important to "take the high road."

Personal attacks, hatefulness, rash accusations, snide insinuations, misleading assertions, and outright lies are the stock in trade of many posters, but the most effective way to disarm and dismiss these posts is to rise far above such tactics.

Name-calling, abrasiveness, unsupported and insupportable assertions, and otherwise descending to the level of negative posters' inanities not only undermines one's credibility, but reduces the likelihood that one's comments will be accepted and printed.

Submissions should be brief and concise. Two or three short paragraphs is about all that the average reader will assimilate . Be polite, but factual.

Try to deal with reality, and not with far out ideas or wishful thinking.

Take your own concept or idea and address it as thoughtfully, professionally, and concisely as possible.

But first read the existing comments and make sure you are not repeating what someone else has already posted.

Mission:

The Greenwich Chamber of Commerce will encompass and promote the well-being of the entire business community within Greenwich while maintaining the town's residential integrity and enhancing our quality of life.

The Chamber, an independent non-profit business organization, has served Greenwich since 1917. Our purpose is to improve the town's business climate while promoting the civic and social interest of the community.

The Chamber has never been more vibrant than it is today. The Board of Directors and the new professional staff of the Greenwich Chamber of Commerce are well suited to guide the organization through the fast-changing business climate of the 21st century. We are prepared to encompass all businesses under one umbrella, to address town-wide business issues, to serve as the town's information resource center, and to provide Chamber members with a broad-based member benefit package.

In December of 1920, a small group of Greenwich business and professional men, feeling that it was time to have a men's luncheon club where views on business and community affairs could be discussed, decided that the Rotary concept of "Service Above Self" seemed to meet their ideals.

The Rotary Club of Greenwich was then chartered in April 21, 1921. Since that time, Greenwich Rotarians have been volunteering their time and resources to help others in the Greenwich community and throughout the world.

The Greenwich Club has been a leader at the local and international level, sponsoring the chartering of many neighboring Rotary Clubs, and serving as the home club of Charlie Pettengill, Sr. 1964-1965 President of Rotary International, and 1995-96 District Governor Jim Cooper.

Registration Requirements

To vote, you must be a U.S. citizen, a resident of the town where you wish to vote, at least 18 years of age, and registered on Election Day.

Residents may request an application form to be sent and must return their form postmarked to the Registrar by October 21, 2008 in order to be permitted to participate in the Presidential election. Registering in person deadline is October 28, 2008. Those, whose rights as to age, citizenship, new residence, may apply in person at the Registrars Office between 9am and 12noon on November 3, 2008.

The Registrar of Voters Office is open Monday through Friday, 8am to 4pm.

If you are permanently physically disabled, you may arrange to have an election official visit you and take your application to the register. Call the Registrar of Voters Office for further details.

Hearing impaired persons may call Hartford TDD 1-(860)566-1730.

Special Voter Registration

In order to accommodate those citizens unable to register during regular work hours, the Registrars of Voters holds special registration sessions.

How to register

Register in person at the Town Clerk's Office or Registrar of Voters Office at Town Hall, at any office of the State Motor Vehicles, or at libraries throughout the state.

You may also register by written request, sent to the Town Clerk or Registrar of Voters by mail.

NOTE: As of January 1, 2003, additional information is required by Help America Vote Act Public Law 107-252 to register to vote by mail.

ONE of the following must be submitted to the Registrar of Voters with Voter Mail-in Applications:

- A copy of photo ID (e.g., driver's license)
- Current utility bill
- Bank statement
- Paycheck or
- Government document that shows the name and address of the voter

The item must be attached to an application and the last four digits of the social security number must be written on the application form next to the last name. Failure to provide this information will create a delay at the polls during Federal Election Day.

Absentee Ballots

Greenwich Wi-Fi Connections

What did we ever do before wireless networks? But you may as well be sending smoke signals if you can't find one when you're on the go. Before you head out with your laptop, check here first for where to log on. Remember, not all "hot spots" are free [if they are, remember to at least buy something or tip the staff]. Some locations allow you to buy a day pass, but if you're always away from your office, you'll do better to get wireless access from your cellphone provider.

Greenwich News Archive - Hamilton Avenue School Saga

December 2003: Board of Education approves funds for construction planning for the school.

March 2004: Preliminary plans call for renovating or rebuilding at a cost of $22-$24 million, with a fall 2007 re-opening.

May 2004: Board of Education approves plan to relocate students to a temporary modular facility to be built at Western Middle School.

June 2004: Representative Town Meeting postpones approval of a school building committee because "educational specifications" have not been finalized.

August 2004: Building firm recommends rebuilding, instead of renovating, the school; Superintendent of Schools Larry Leverett backs the plan.

September 2004: RTM approves the building committee, chaired by Frank Mazza, a retired engineer who has served on building committees for Cos Cob, Glenville and Greenwich High schools.

October 2004: School board approves funds for school reconstruction and purchase of a pre-fabricated modular facility. Relocation to the modular facility scheduled for December 2005.

November 2004: School officials postpone students' move to the modular building until February, citing unforeseen construction problems and bad weather.

Dec. 3, 2004: Closing ceremony held at the old Hamilton Avenue School.

January 2005: School officials postpone students' move to the modular building to March, citing unexpected site conditions and a lengthy permitting process. Tempe, Ariz.-based PinnacleOne is selected as project manager.

March 2005: School officials postpone students' move to the modular building to April, citing additional unforeseen construction problems. Costs expected to exceed the $3 million budget by $390,000.

April 26, 2005: Students' first day of class at the modular building.

Mid-August 2005: With plumbing, wires and drywall stripped, crews begin knocking down the old Chickahominy school.

September 2005: Bidding begins on a contract to build a 92-space parking garage at the school.

October 2005: Building committee awards an estimated $1.6 million contract to Bethel-based Worth Construction, the lowest bidder, to build garage.

Nov. 6, 2005: Worth is ousted from $46 million highway contract by New York comptroller, who cites alleged mob ties. The firm has also been implicated in a bribery probe involving the former Waterbury mayor. Worth denies the allegations.

March 2006: Town attorney begins investigation of Worth; later gives building committee legal clearance to continue working with the general contractor, according to Mazza.

April 24, 2006: Building committee awards an estimated $22 million contract to Worth, the lowest bidder among three, to gut and rebuild the school.

May 2006: Construction work begins at the school, with "substantial completion" scheduled for July 2007.

September 2006: Hamilton Avenue School is cited for achieving the third highest increase in fourth-grade scores on Connecticut Mastery Test over the last two years.

December 2006: School board member Michael Bodson says the project has fallen about a month behind schedule, but can get back on track.

April 4, 2007: Hamilton Avenue School is honored as one of four "Connecticut Vanguard Schools" by the state Department of Education for significant gains on the CMT; school gets $20,000 grant.

Mid-April 2007: Building committee says chances are dwindling that the project will make its July completion deadline, citing a cold spell and unexpected slowdowns by Worth, among other reasons.

April 23-27, 2007: Officials postpone the school's re-opening from late August 2007 to the middle of the 2007-08 school year because of delays. Sternberg assigns Tony Byrne, director of facilities, to attend job-site meetings. Mazza orders project manager to increase its presence at the job site, fulfilling a request by Worth.

May 21-25, 2007: Trade union members boycott work at the school to protest Worth's alleged use nonunion sheet metal workers.

June 11, 2007: RTM approves building committee's request for an additional $545,000 in interim funding.

June 24, 2007: School officials set a new timeline: Reconstruction to be finished by mid-October; teachers to relocate in December; school to re-open in January.

Late July 2007: Construction officials push back projected completion date to November, citing delays in steel shipments that forced workers to install temporary weatherproofing, which later broke during storms, causing water damage.

Sept. 11, 2007: Worth officials say a new round of delays will push the project's completion date to late December. School is now expected to re-open sometime in the spring 2008.

Mid-September 2007: Building committee and Worth begin closed-door meetings to discuss finishing work without lawsuits.

Mid-October 2007: Fire inspectors uncover minor fire code-related issues at the modular building. Parents concerned about crowding, but school officials say occupancy is below class-size and safety guidelines.

Late October 2007: Project manager says inspection problems, substandard work and design flaws have placed project in jeopardy of missing December deadline; March completion said to be more likely with summer move expected to follow.

Early November 2007: Worth begins refusing to pay for temporary heating at the school. Committee says the firm is contractually obligated to pay. Progress slows on interior work.

Nov. 13, 2007: Outgoing First Selectman Jim Lash recommends hiring San Francisco-based firm URS Corporation to mediate the dispute and speed up work.

Nov. 27, 2007: Building committee says project will be mostly complete by May, instead of March, depending on when the building will be heated.

Dec. 4, 2007: After talks between URS and Worth break down, building committee votes to pay to heat the building during the winter months.

Dec. 12, 2007: Committee requests $550,000 from the town in additional funding for the project.

Dec. 29, 2007: Heat is turned back on at the school, more than a week after the Dec. 18 target date because officials had not received the certification from a duct work manufacturer. Work resumes in several areas of the school.

Jan. 14, 2008: RTM approves building committee's request for an additional $550,000 in interim funding intended to help spur the project to completion.

Jan. 22, 2008: Project manager says the project won't be done by May, unless on-the-job manpower increases above the average of 50 workers.

Feb. 29, 2008: Mold is discovered at the modular building during an investigation into a roof leak in a fifth-grade classroom.

March 3-7, 2008: The modular building is closed for a week. District officials say they'll re-assign students to six other schools -- Old Greenwich, North Street, Glenville, Parkway, Cos Cob and Western Middle -- for the rest of the school year.

Early March 2008: Short-term tests taken at the modular building shortly after the relocation reveal no air quality issues related to mold, but one longer-acting test shows a higher level of nontoxic mold spores, according to a consultant hired by the school board.

Mid-March 2008: A complaint filed by a parent with the U.S. Department of Education accuses district officials of racial discrimination against Hamilton Avenue students, 60 percent of whom are minorities. Federal officials say the complaint warrants investigation.

March 2008: Connecticut Mastery Test administered to Hamilton Avenue School students, who have resumed classes at six other schools.

April 24, 2008: The school board votes to remediate the modular building so it can be used in the fall. The remediation project is expected to take four months and cost up to $1 million. The second option would have been to use Western Greenwich Civic Center.

May 12, 2008: RTM approves $972,000 in funding to clean up mold at the modular building.

June 9, 2008: Despite grumbling about the project being over budget and behind schedule, the RTM approves a $200,000 interim appropriation, requested by the building committee in May, to complete work at the school.

June 11, 2008: High levels of mold found in a wall, outside a modular building and on a piece of carpeting show that students and staff were exposed to the spores, according to test results by a certified industrial hygienist hired by a parent group.

Mid-June 2008: The air in two modular classrooms shows active mold growth, according to a follow-up report released by school officials, though they say it's unclear whether the air had always been moldy or only became that way since the March relocation.

Late June 2008: Construction and design flaws that went undetected when the structures were built three years ago caused mold growth at the modular building, not lack of maintenance or oversight by administrators, says a consultant.

Early July 2008: Mold remediation under way at the modular building.

Late July 2008: School board developing contingency plans for relocating Hamilton Avenue and Glenville students in case the Chickahominy school isn't ready to accommodate students by the start of the 2008-09 school year.

July 29, 2008: Building committee votes to request $320,000 in additional town funding in hopes of expediting completion of remaining work necessary for an Aug. 27 re-opening. The figure later jumps to $500,000 because of new work orders.

July 29, 2008: School board approves delaying the start of the school year for Hamilton Avenue by a week to give crews more time to finish work for needed for a temporary occupancy certificate. If inspectors grant the certificate by Aug. 8, students will be allowed to return to the school for class on Sept. 8. If not, they have to return to the modular building, while Glenville School students are re-assigned to four other schools, as demolition begins on their school.

Aug. 1, 2008: Worth President Joe Pontoriero says there is no chance the school will be approved by Aug. 8. With inspectors calling for new building modifications, an Aug. 15 completion is more realistic, he says.

Aug. 8, 2008: With no temporary occupancy certificate, school board proceeds with contingency plan to send Hamilton Avenue students to the modular building and disperse Glenville students to Parkway, Julian Curtiss, Cos Cob and Western Middle schools.

Aug. 15, 2008: The Board of Estimate and Taxation tentatively agrees to set aside $500,000 to help pay for remaining work, but with the condition that the building committee keeps closer tabs for the BET on how the money is being spent.

Late-August 2008: Test results show Hamilton Avenue students' scores plummeting on the 2008 CMT. School officials cite severe disruptions caused by the relocation of students in March.

Aug. 27, 2008: An environmental consultant hired by the school board assures parents at a meeting that the modular building has been remediated and the classrooms are safe to inhabit.

Late August 2008: School board members say they are considering relocating students to the new school in mid-October if the TCO arrives by mid-September.

Sept. 15, 2008: RTM approves building committee's interim funding request, which has risen from $320,000 in July, to $500,000 in August, to $700,000 in September. Committee members cite a slew of new expenses needed to meet inspection standards.

Sept. 18, 2008: Federal investigators dismiss allegations made by a parent in March that the district is racially discriminating against students. In the report, officials say while significant disparities are evident, there is "insufficient evidence" to show resources were being denied on the bases of race or national origin.

Sept. 30, 2008: Parents submit a petition with more than 500 signatures to the school's building committee opposing an idea floated by several committee members to remove Worth from the project by revoking the bond that guarantees its contract, citing concerns about delaying the school's re-opening for months.

Oct. 7, 2008: BET Chairman Steve Walko calls for all groups involved in the reconstruction to begin meeting every week to resolve disputes and push forward with finishing the project.

Nov. 26, 2008: BOE Chairwoman Nancy Weissler says a TCO must arrive by Dec. 5 if students are to safely return to classes at the school after holiday breaks end Jan. 5. Otherwise, she said, the school board may not schedule a move until spring 2009 to avoid interfering with CMT prep.

Dec. 3, 2008: School officials say they are moving forward with plans to re-open Hamilton Avenue in early January, on the assumption that the building committee will have secured the TCO on Dec. 19.

Dec. 19, 2008: The building committee fails to secure a TCO after the manufacturer of the school's boiler system refuses to approve last-minute safety modifications to its equipment, citing liability concerns.

Dec. 22, 2008: Sternberg calls off earlier plans to move staff and equipment into the new school over holiday break, citing the eleventh-hour impasse with the boiler manufacturer.

Jan. 27, 2009: Building committee says it will have to seek an additional $200,000 from the town to pay for unanticipated facilities work and compensate the project manager, architect and contractor for additional time spent on the job.

Jan. 30, 2009: Town building officials grant a TCO for the school, after certifying that the installation of replacement ventilation pipes to the boiler system, as well as a patch job on an interior wall, complies with fire safety standards. Though the school is now safe to occupy, school officials say they will wait until spring to relocate.

Feb. 3, 2009: After re-examining the decision, school officials say they will allow staff to begin moving into the school over February break, clearing the way for students to resume classes when winter recess ends in mid February.

Feb. 4, 2009: A spot in the kitchen ceiling rouses suspicions of mold growth in the new building. Inspectors confirm the presence of mold near the water stain, but say the impact on the environmental quality is negligible, according to a letter dated Feb. 5.

Feb. 17, 2009: Students and staff return to their rebuilt schoolhouse for their first day of classes there in more than three years.
